GASOLINE TAXES NOW 9 CENTS A GALLON

Gasoline pumps throughout Maine will display new permanent signs telling the total gasoline tax paid by motorists, Frank W. Rutter of Portland, chairman of the State Petroleum Industries Committee, announced today.

The message on the sign will read: Price includes nine cents tax on each gallon.

Mr. Rutter said the new Tax Reminders will reflect the increase in the Maine gasoline tax from six cents to seven cents per gallon which went into effect this year. In addition to this state tax there is a federal tax on gasoline of two cents per gallon.

He noted that the nine cents a gallon which Maine motorists now pay in state and federal taxes on gasoline amounts to forty-three percent of the price, which today is twelve cents a gallon lower than the average price paid in this state in 1950.

Last year Maine motorists paid $21,330,000 in state and federal gasoline taxes, and the most recent increase of one cent per gallon will add an annual expense to the motor vehicle operator of $2,700,000, Mr. Rutter predicted.

Pointing out that gasoline, unlike other commodities, today sells for less than its price of 35 years ago, Mr. Rutter declared that many motorists are unaware of how much taxes add to the cost of the product.

He declared that "the gas tax reminder program is an important educational step for the people of this state. The committee's goal is to have the Tax Reminders posted on every gasoline pump in the state."

ALBANY FIRE CALLS BETHEL FIREMEN

Rev. Lella Anderson, "Pilgrim Circuit Rider," spoke at recent meetings of religious groups in Dixfield. She is touring the county and plans to visit all Congregational Churches.

COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

As most of you know the Bethel Village Corporation voted to dissolve subject to Legislative Action and also subject to Town action. The last regular Session of Legislature passed this favorable to Town acceptance, to be acted upon by the Town any time within one year from Aug. 20, 1955.

It would seem that whatever action the Town wishes to take on this should be before the next Annual Town meeting as this will allow a clear understanding of budget requirements.

We expect to call a Special Town Meeting soon to allow the voters to make their decision.

O. T. Rozelle

ERMA THURSTON YOUNG

Erma Thurston Young was born in Newry, May 23, 1892, the daughter of Howard Forest and Tena Littlehale Thurston. She attended schools in Newry, Gould Academy and Hebron Academy, graduating from the latter in 1912. Following her graduation she taught for a short time in the Newry schools.

In 1914 the family moved to Bethel and that same year she married Ralph Young of Bethel and here they have since resided. Mrs. Young passed away at her Main Street home on Saturday, Oct. 29, after a long illness. About 20 years ago she became a victim of arthritis. All that medical aid, including many periods of hospitalization, could do was hers, but to no avail in allaying the progress of this painful disease. For nearly two years she was confined to a wheel chair.

Mrs. Young was an unusually versatile person and as long as her health permitted she was an active participant in the community life. Her growing inability did not lessen her interests in the community and its people.

She was a lover of music from childhood and became an accomplished pianist. She taught both piano and violin. Her musical compositions, several of which were published, reflected the tender feeling which was hers.

During her years of confinement Mrs. Young wrote a book entitled "Yesterday and Today." It was published about two years ago.

An outstanding community service was her organization of the children's orchestra known as the Bluebird Orchestra. Under the direction of Mrs. Young this orchestra not only fostered the interest in and appreciation for music among the boys and girls, but it added much to many programs of entertainment in the community.

Definitely her hands in the household duties of her attractive home. Well might one say of her "She looked well to the ways of her household and catcheth not the bread of idleness." After completing the daily round of duties, she might be found making a dress, knitting a sweater, or giving a music lesson. For some time previous to her lameness she was popular among her friends as a hand dresser.

Although so closely confined to her home, she was not forgotten by her many friends whose frequent calls added much to her happiness, while they, in turn, felt the warmth of that hospitality which characterized her home.

Mrs. Young's family and friends who have witnessed her long suffering are comforted by the thought that "God giveth his beloved sleep."

Besides her husband, she leaves a son, Richard; a brother Hugh Thurston; and two grandchildren, Pamela and Donald Young.

Funeral services were held at the Greenleaf funeral home Monday afternoon. Rev. Charles Pendleton officiating. Interment was at Riverside cemetery.

TODAY'S meditation

Thursday, November 3

Read Matthew 25:34-40.
"Truly, I say to you, as you did it to one of the least of these my brethren, you did it to me." (Matthew 25:40, RSV.)

The story is told, both in prose and poetry, of a cobler who one day expected a visit from the Lord. The day had passed. Now it was evening, and the cobbler sat, disappointed, in his lowly shop, which he had cleaned and decorated for the Lord's coming. Then came a voice. Three times the Lord had come, it said. He was the beggar, to whom Conrad had given shoes for his bruised feet; the weary woman, to whom he had given bread; and the lost child, to whom he had given a cup of milk and then taken home. Jesus identified himself with the hungry, the naked, the sick and the imprisoned—those in need.

Let us seize opportunities to help Christ by helping people who are in need today—the lonely and discouraged, the sorrowing, the hungry, the homeless, and ill-clothed, those we have despised and passed by. Our ministries of love to them are ministries to Christ Himself.

Prayer

Open our eyes, our Father, that we may see the needs of Thy children. Open our hearts that we may try to fulfill their needs, remembering, too, that all need to know of Thee. Open our minds to understand that by ministering to them, in Thy name, we minister to Thee. Amen.

Thought For the Day

Today I will seek to find new ways to serve Christ.

ACROSS the DESK

Ideas from other editors

From the Canton Independent-Bentley, Canton, Pennsylvania: Now that new-model automobiles are upon us, it is time to remind readers that they should demand safety belts in the cars they purchase in the future. All statistics and tests conducted by leading manufacturers in the past year prove conclusively that safety belts save a surprising percentage of lives in automobile collisions.

Contrary to what most people think, and despite the fact that total casualties on the highways are rising, the percentage of deaths, measured by the miles travelled, has decreased in recent years.

One reason there is reason to believe that the percentage fatality rate can be decreased, further is the introduction of safety belts on cars . . . and the increasing use of soft padding on the dashboards of cars. In addition, many automobiles have been strengthened so that the roof will stand up better in case of a turnover.

In this respect, it is interesting to point out that some manufacturers who have removed center posts in sports models have actually reinforced the top, despite removal of this brace, more than enough to offset removal of the center post.

We hope the public will begin to insist upon safety features, safety in design and all features offered by new cars designed to increase the life expectancy of the person behind the wheel, who is often not expendable.

From the Suburban List, Essex Junction, Vermont: A Harvard University professor wants the nation to keep the public debt large. He won't have to worry about it very much. That public debt, now of 385 billion dollars, will not likely be reduced any. His opinion is that such a large debt is necessary to provide savings and charitable institutions as well as individuals an outlet for investment of money. He told a lot of bankers that "the public debt is the backbone of our monetary and banking system." If that statement can be accepted as true, then there need not be much worry about what the government owes.

From the Whitehall Times, Whitehall, Wisconsin: Too many Americans, in this matter of regarding the interests of the public, are content to "Let George Do It," not realizing that "George" died several decades ago.

Economic Highlights . . . . .

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual—National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare. Early in his recently-published memoirs, former President Truman discusses a serious problem he had to face when suddenly elevated to the White House. The war was still raging and innumerable matters of the first importance had to be dealt with. Yet, it seems, Mr. Truman, as Vice-President had not been among President Roosevelt's inner circle. Mr. Roosevelt had concentrated power in his own hands, and often had tended to keep his own counsel. Vital information had not been confided to Mr. Truman. He did not, for example, even know about the successful effort of the Manhattan Project in creating the atomic bomb. That has been called the best-kept secret of all time—and the secrecy extended to the man who stood only one heartbeat from the Presidency. Other Vice-Presidents who succeeded to the Presidency have been in a comparable position. Their work was confined to the relatively single function delegated to them by the Constitution—presiding over the Senate. One Vice-President actually resigned on the grounds that the position was too unimportant. Mr. Truman presents a strong case for giving all future Vice-Presidents duties and responsibilities commensurate with the title, so that they may be as fully prepared as possible should destiny call them to the biggest and most difficult job in the world.

It is now clear that President Eisenhower did just about this, so far as the present legal structure of the government permits. He has always emphasized the importance of the team and opposed surrounding any one man with the aura of indispensability. This may well have stemmed from his career as a soldier.

THE LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

You know, now and then, as you sit home for an evening and you pick up a paper and see right there in bold and dark type the headlines that your Rambo owes. If perchance gives you a qualm in the pit of the stomach. That all-time feeling is the result of a 20 year build-up of a "do-everything" Govt. But the sudden qualm is not beyond reach of the doctor—and every person can be his own M. D. of finance.

We been asking for too much from Govt. Just ask for less—it is that easy. Don't be a sucker for the flamboyant congressman or senator who wants to get your town a new full-lined swimming pool. Also don't be enough of a yodel to ask for more in the first place. Also don't fall for the notion that Govt. ownership or State or Town ownership is not undermining a free America. Tax exempt projects are a main culprit—a major cause for that reason—you been feeling—don't about manna and how will little George and little Patricia fare as they grow up.

On my trusty slide rule it says you are donating the projects money in the first place and now in the second place, paying interest on same, or a reasonable facsimile of such via having to make up for the deficit taxes that the exempt projects do not pay. No wonder there is a flutter in our midriff section.

Yours with the low down,
JO HENSLA

GLASS ROOSTS OPINION

Mound, Minn., Minneapolis Pilot: "An attitude change must be effected among our teenagers if we are to increase the supply of scientific minds. They must be made to see the necessity of doing more than meeting just the minimum requirements both in high school and college. This is a job which falls squarely to the teacher, the counselor and the parent . . . By allowing, and sometimes inadvertently encouraging, youngsters to take the course of least resistance, we not only defeat our purposes but could possibly crush our own society."

WONDERS AREN'T ALWAYS BIG

In line with some millions of magazine readers we were appropriately appalled a few weeks ago by the highly informative story of the Seven Wonders of American Engineering. Listed were the Panama Canal, Colorado River Aqueduct, Empire State Building, Grand Coulee Dam, Hoover Dam, Chicago's Sewage Disposal System, and the San Francisco-Oakland Bridge. Nevertheless we find great satisfaction and agreement with the weekly article by Maine's John Gould in The Christian Science Monitor last week. We hope our readers will enjoy reading and perhaps agree with the following:

"Now I can think of two bridges which interest me a good deal more than the San Francisco bridge, neither of which you have ever heard of, and probably will never hear again. One of them is the longest single-span in the world. I supposed the conditioned American, seeing that claim, immediately conjectures something that goes on and on into perspective—a tremendous continuity of bridge. But as a matter of fact this is a rather short bridge, and the genius lies in the claim rather than the construction. This bridge is across the Androscoggin River at Livermore Falls, here in Maine, and it's a little longer than a bowling alley and not much wider. Of course, it's not the longest bridge in the world. It's not even the longest span in the world. It's simply the longest bridge made with one span.

"The other bridge that comes to mind is, or was, the only cast-iron bridge in the world. This one was at Bowdoinham, Maine, and has since been removed in what I consider unwise tinkering by our state agencies. I would rather have a cast-iron bridge than a tourist, but others think differently. So they took the cast-iron bridge out to put in a modern structure which holds no records and no charm. I think if our standards were rectified we might look upon this cast-iron bridge as something even more wonderful than the Bay Bridge. You've got to have the whole story.

"The town of Bowdoinham decided to build a bridge, and appointed a committee to investigate costs. They conferred, probably, with the good old Boston Bridge Works, the usual thing in this region, and came back with figures. Now a gentleman whose name, I believe, was Reed operated a stove foundry at Bowdoinham in those days. He made stoves and grates, trivets, weather-vanes and such, and he got up in town meeting and said he thought he could cast a bridge cheaper than that. If the citizens would bide their time until he could do it. He thought the money to be saved was worth it. The townfolk agreed, and he went to work.

"First, he had to make patterns, which meant making the bridge out of wood to begin with. As soon as a part was patterned he would cast as many pieces as they'd need, and part by part the bridge began to be piled up at the site. They got some rods and made bolts, and a blacksmith tapped out nuts. Then one day they put the bridge up and it served for about 100 years. If it wasn't the only cast-iron bridge in the world, it was the only one Mr. Reed ever made for the town of Bowdoinham and the Cathance River, which is also a record.

"The thing is that when modern man makes up a list of wonders, he has to pick out the gigantic, colossal, stupendous. I don't subscribe to this as an immutable premise. The fact that the San Francisco-Oakland bridge cost $75,000,000 would not have impressed the Bowdoinham folks as much as the satisfying news that, theirs cost a good deal less. Such things are relative, and should be a part of greatness.

"I wonder if the invention of a storm sash that could be thrown cold out and could go on and off easily, couldn't be construed as great engineering-wise, as the construction of the Panama Canal? It certainly is a great help, shows inventiveness, genius, engineering skill, and probably helps just as many people in its own way. Of course, it isn't big . . .

"I hesitate to say so in the face of obvious disagreement, but I think there is something wrong with a culture that sees the tremendous as good, and can't list seven wonders without at least one dam, bridge, building and sewer plant. The Seven Wonders of the Ancient World are all gone except the pyramids—and they are getting old—and it may be our duty and canals and sewage will last a century in time. But we have loved the Bible, Homer's epics, some verses of Shakespeare, and some of the still survive, and where is the Colosseum of Rhodes?

"Grand Coulee Dam weighs 22-600,000 tons! As far as I'm concerned, the engineering knowledge needed just to compute that, let alone building the dam, is exciting. But if you want to see something really wonderful, bide out in the woods, beside a stream, and watch a colony of beavers build a dam. It won't too big a dam, but it's a wonder, too!"

DALE CARNEGIE

★ AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING" ★

ONE day Doris M. Weller, 126 S. Erie Street, Mercer, Pennsylvania, heard a pronouncement that seemed a condemnation. Her best friend—the best pal she had, her mother—condemned to death. Naturally she was stunned. The doctor said she would have from six months to two years at the most.

Doris didn't see how she could endure living with that weighty secret on her mind. How could she take care of her mother over that long period of time? She would find herself thinking, on a beautiful spring day or at the first snowfall, "Mother won't be here this time next year to enjoy this beautiful day."

At last she made up her mind to one thing: She was going to make the remaining days for her mother as pleasant and as happy as it was humanly possible. And she did. She says now that she would not have changed a day in the way she took care of her mother—and that she was actually happy during that time.

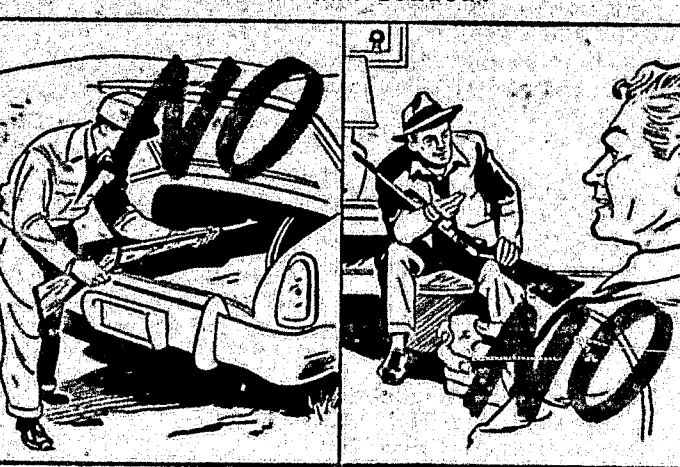

—and enjoyed doing. She was so busy making her mother happy she had no time to think. And she was much more able to accept the inevitable than she had thought she could ever do.

A saying of her mother's constantly comes to her mind which has helped her greatly: "The Lord will never give us a too difficult problem, nor too heavy a burden to carry."

GOULD ACADEMY

Gould Eleven Travels to Fryeburg Saturday

The Gould-Fryeburg game at Fryeburg Saturday will bring to a close the 1955 season for both clubs. The Huskies will have a few of their injured back but will still not be at full strength. With only one victory to its credit Gould had its poorest season in many years. Fryeburg, the host club, will be gunning to stop Gould's long string of victories over them, while the visitors will be trying to seek consolation for their poor record of the season. It should be a close hard fought game with the nod going to Fryeburg Academy. The Gould Academy Band and a large delegation of students are planning to attend the game. In preparation for the last game of the season a rally bonfire dance is planned for Friday evening at 7 p. m.

The first term examinations will be held on Thursday and Friday of this week.

The third in the School Assembly Service Program will be held on Monday, Nov. 7, at 8:10 a. m. in Hanescom Hall. Captain Paul V. Dry, veteran of sixteen years sea duty in the Merchant Marine, will be heard in a fascinating story of his experiences which started as an ordinary seaman and worked up to the captaincy of large vessels. He completed five trips around the world, visited 60 countries and logged over a million miles of ocean travel. Capt. Dry's lecture, "Down to the Sea in Ships," is a type of dynamic illustrated lecture everyone enjoys. It makes real life on the sea in all types of boats under all sorts of actual conditions. The public is cordially invited to attend.

The Freshmen Tea

As the bell rang at 3:15 on Thursday afternoon, October 27, the Freshmen girls of Gould poured out of Hanescom Hall as usual, but instead of going their separate ways, they all headed for Gehring Hall where there was to be an informal tea for their class.

Organized by the freshmen dormitory girls with the help of two senior members of the dorm council, and Mrs. Goggin, the hostess, the tea had been planned by the very last detail. In the dining room, on a gaily decorated table were plates of appetizing tidbits of all types—small sandwiches, Halloween cupcakes, mints, nuts and cookies. At one end was a large punch bowl and at the other end, tea, both poured by several of the freshmen girls in turn.

At the door everyone was warmly greeted by Valerie Kelch and Susan Denison who made them instantly feel at home. Amid the chattering girls, Susan Fossett and Pat Philbrook were busy refilling plates of food and Sue Corcoran and Tracy Hardley could be seen at the serving table pouring tea and punch.

After a guided tour through the dormitory by Judy Watson, many of the girls who had other appointments to keep hurried off, all agreeing that it had been a great success and a good chance to get together with their classmates.

The Gould cross country team with victories over Dixfield High, Portland High and Hebron Academy, and with only one loss to Fryeburg Academy, will enter the State Meet at Orono, Thursday, Nov. 3. As many as 30 teams are expected to compete with approximately 200 runners taking part. In the annual event, those making the trip from Gould will be Phil Karhonen, Mel Jodrey, Richard Grover, Eldred Rolfe, John Mander, Bradley Benson, Guy Whitten, Manager Craig Dore and Coach Fossett.

The Latin II Class of Gould Academy presented a skit in assembly Wednesday morning. The skit was in the form of a football rally in which the members of the class became gods and goddesses and the stage in Hanescom Hall became Mt. Olympus. Prompted by a letter from a Gould student asking for help for the football team, speed given by Mercury played by Richard Grover, power by Hercules played by Alan Ordway, and brains given by Minerva played by Dawnie Christie were imparted to representatives of the team. Jupiter, King of the Gods and played by Herbert Morton, was ably assisted by Apollo played by Larry Bragg, Pan, played by Bill Gallagher, and the cheerleaders led the student body in a song and a few cheers.

Pampa, Tex., Daily News: "We are tremendously benefitted by eye-drops to the very last detail. In the dining room, on a gaily decorated table were plates of appetizing tidbits of all types—small sandwiches, Halloween cupcakes, mints, nuts and cookies. At one

MAINE BROILER INDUSTRY GOING STRONG

Maine's broiler industry is still going strong. It has boosted Maine's poultry business to the No. 1 spot in agricultural income. Frank D. Reed, Extension poultry marketing specialist, expects a production in Maine of about 35 million broiler chickens this year. All five major poultry processors in the Pine Tree State are expanding, and a new and modern plant is under construction in Lewiston. The favorable broiler price situation this year has helped further the boom. One man can care for 12,000 broilers at a time, or total of 48,000 per year by raising four lots.

V. A. NEWS LETTER

Service men may accept "conditional" discharges without jeopardizing their chances for further education and training benefits under the Korean GI Bill, Manager M. L. Stoddard, of the Veterans Administration Center, Togus, said today.

"Conditional" discharges usually are granted to permit a serviceman to accept a commission as an officer or warrant officer, or to reenlist in the regular active service. Stoddard said that servicemen with such discharges may continue to secure GI training time up to the end of the original period they were obligated to serve—usually two years in the case of those drafted, and three years for those who enlisted.

As an example of how servicemen may build up GI entitlement, Stoddard cited the case of a man who entered service for a two-year period on December 1, 1954. This week he will receive a "conditional" discharge to accept a commission. Despite this discharge, he will continue to accrue GI training time up to December 1, 1956, the end of his obligated two-year service period—even though he may stop on active duty longer.

At the rate of 1 1/2 days training time for each day served, the man would be eligible for the maximum of three years' training, Stoddard said.

The serviceman may start his GI training any time up to three years from his actual discharge or release from service, and that training must end within eight years from the date of actual discharge or January 31, 1965, whichever comes earlier.

Conservation Farming In Oxford County

by Douglas L. Marston
Soil Conservation Service

The tree planting demonstration was held as scheduled last Friday. The Oxford County Soil Conservation District planted 2,000 seedling trees with their newly acquired heavy-duty tree planting machine. The demonstration was held on the District owned lot in Brownfield.

The purpose of the demonstration was to acquaint land-owners in that area with possibility of planting with machinery in burned-over land.

The State Forest Nursery of Orono furnished the trees for the demonstration and the planter was hauled by one of Raynor Brown's large bulldozers. The blade on the bulldozer was set at an angle to remove the dead trees and other debris from in front of the planter.

The machine worked very well despite the very adverse conditions under which it was working. Forestry officials from both the State and Federal Forest Services seemed quite impressed with the job that the tree planter was doing.

The United States Forest Service Experiment Station at Alfred, Maine, plans to plant about 40 acres with the machine on their land next spring.

We certainly hope that others will become interested in using the planter and further information may be obtained by contacting the Soil Conservation Service office at South Paris, Maine.

1956 OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC AVAILABLE THIS WEEK

Of interest this week is the appearance of the 164th annual continuous edition of the Old Farmer's Almanac. This world-famous publication still follows the format adopted in 1793 by its founder, Robert B. Thomas. The story of ry Sesquicentennial will be shown on the screen. This should prove a pleasant gathering for all who attend.

The first deer to be tagged in Newry was shot by Bob Morton Tuesday morning.

the famous prediction of snow, rain and hail which came true on July 13, 1816, is still used by the publisher as a reminder of their dependable prognostications.

The mixture of old and new which now features the old almanac may be the attraction which encouraged this year's print order of a million copies. The ever-popular appearance of the wood cuts first made by Abel Bowen for the 1809 edition and several pages of New England pictures and modern color printing, with the usual predictions and statistics all contribute to the still increasing readership of the book.

PHONY MEDICAL CURES COST MILLIONS

No one knows how many millions of dollars Americans donate each year to perpetuate the institution of medical quackery, says the editor of "Changing Times," the Kiplinger Magazine. Nor is it known how many persons sacrifice their well-being and even their lives in a mad gamble for an easy painless way to health.

Quackery is good business. In the cancer field alone, it is estimated that $10,000,000 goes annually to quacks. Self-styled "cures" of diabetes, arthritis and other incurable diseases take millions more. Diabetics living normal lives with the aid of insulin throw away their needles, take promising nostrums instead, and die in comas, sometimes forever. Life-saving surgery and pin their faith on useless pills. Sufferers from arthritis pay high prices for pills they could buy cheaply under the familiar label, aspirin. Most drugs now offered for internal use are not in themselves dangerous, but hazardous in that they keep the gullible from seeking competent medical advice.

The age of electronics has given a buzzing short-wave radio transmitters, numerous dials, flashing lights and mysterious radiations to the medical device racket. Fancy or primitive, no one is ever cured by phony treatment machines or costly bottles of worthless pills. To avoid being taken in by the quacks, "Changing Times" offers these ways to protect yourself:

Ask your family doctor about the product, device or treatment. Be wary of anyone in the healing arts who advertises his product or services or who refuses or discourages consultations. Be wary of any promoter of a medical product or service who claims he is being "persecuted" by the medical profession. Don't fall for anything that promises to cure cancer, diabetes, arthritis, or any serious condition. Don't be taken in by testimonials from grateful patients for the quack's "cured" patients often have only his word that they had the disease in the first place.

ARMOR FOR MOTORISTS

A race seems to be on to determine whether the new safety devices for motorists can keep up with the growing horsepower—and speed—of motor cars. Safety belts are here, along with safety door latches and padded dashboards. Shatter-proof mirrors and rear-facing seats with high shock-resistant headrests are being talked of as protection in accidents. More defense of some nature (possibly a coat of mail) is being urged for the occupant of what is called the "death seat" on the right hand of the driver.

Yet at the rate motor car horsepower is going up, more radical safety measures may be needed. New 1956 cars in the medium and high priced range will feature more engines of 200-plus horsepower. With some as much as 300 horsepower. What a jump from 1910 when a luxury class, seven passenger model boasted 60 horsepower! Car manufacturers insist that high horsepower is designed to give flexibility rather than speed, but with more superhighways high travel speed seems likely to remain a constant temptation. And problem drivers are multiplying.

The safety experts need to come up with some suitable armor for motoring. Something on the order of the outfit worn by football players, undersea divers, or better still, outer space pilots, might be worked out. Why not? We outfit men for the battlefield—yet more persons have been killed on our highways than in all our wars. Washington Post and Times-Herald.
